Official's Power.

Thomas M. Honan, attorney-general, in an opinion to W. H. O'Brien, auditor of the state, has held that where the state has made an error in granting a patent for lands sold by it, no authority, except that of the legislature, can be invoked to correct the error. In an opinion to Charles A. Greathouse, Mr. Honan has held that a trustee who has unappropriated money in the special school fund may deduct the sum from a bond issue where the issue is for the purpose of constructing a schoolhouse.

HELD MEETING.

Friday Evening to Discuss Matter of Switch.

The Merchants' Association and the directors of the Seymour Improvement Company held a meeting Friday evening to consider the proposition of a switch to the Seymour Manufacturing Company's plant. There were no new developments and a committee representing the two organizations was appointed to try and arrive at a settlement of the vexing question. W. L. Johnson is chairman of the committee and Dr. Shields, Jay C. Smith, Victor Fettig and Geo. Huber are the other members.

FREE CONNECTIONS.

Special Offer by Seymour Public Service Co. Expires June 1.

The Seymour Public Service Co. will connect free of charge all gas ranges purchased from them before June 1st. This special offer will expire on that date. If gas is not in the house they will carry the connection to the mains on this free offer. This is an opportunity for property holders to get gas connections into their property free of charge. Where property is rented the landlord will secure the gas connections into his property provided his tenant purchases a gas range before June 1st from the Seymour Public Service Co., No. 8 S. Chestnut street. Where property is occupied by the owner the same proposition holds good. Remember, however, this special offer expires June 1st.

Project Dead.

The Mars Hill project which was expected to increase the population of Indianapolis 50,000 at one jump, seems to have failed. Not a word regarding it has appeared in the Indianapolis papers recently, though for a time they used a large part of their space in booming the proposition. A special from Indianapolis says that the revelations and excitement following the arrest of McNamara, charged with dynamiting outrages, had the effect of helping kill the project for the present. Labor leaders deny that this was responsible for the failure of the boom. A number of Seymour people bought lots in the Mars Hill addition.

Sunday Closing.

Sunday closing which was inaugurated last Sunday at the Seymour post office, proved very satisfactory. Patrons of the office all agree that Sunday is a day for rest and that post office employees are entitled to one day's rest in seven days just as men employed in other lines of work. In fact there is no more reason for keeping a post office open on Sunday than for keeping other places of business open. Sunday closing is becoming general throughout the country and the demand for a better observance of the Sabbath came from the people.

Seven Hours.

B. & O. Southwestern shop employees are now putting in seven hours a day instead of five. A little figuring proved that the allowance for the month (about $38,000) would admit of the increase in time. There are at present about 720 employees. This would give an average of about $48 for the month to each employee. Some make more and some less, owing to the wage per hour. Monday will be pay day.—Washington Democrat.

Graessle Won Medals.

Seymour did not carry off as many medals and honors as had been expected at the Southeastern Indiana High School Association Reading and Oratorical contest and track meet, at North Vernon Friday. However Seymour was not the lowest in the contests and made a very good showing, considering the fact that North Vernon and Franklin had been putting in weeks of hard work in preparation for the contests.

In the reading contest, the Madison representative won, while Miss Lois Reynolds of Seymour, won second. She read the Arena scene from "Quo Vadis". In the contest in oratory Geo. Given, of Lawrenceburg, won first with Franklin second. Kenzie Hassenzahl was the Seymour representative, his subject being "The Value of a Purpose."

Voss won his honors in the shot put. North Vernon won it with 37 feet, 7 inches.

In the mile relay run Franklin won in 3 min. 58 sec. The Seymour team consisted of Everhart, Foster, Hassenzahl and Graessle. They won 2nd.

CLEAN UP AND BEAUTIFY

An Interesting Communication From Civic League Press Committee.

The Civic League recently organized, will certainly be of great benefit to Seymour and should win the hearty co-operation of every citizen.

We have grown careless regarding our streets, our alleys and the ground bordering our side walks. With clean streets and alleys, will follow clean yards and lawns, as surely as night follows day, for deny it as we may, everybody cares for public opinion. An innate pride will incline your neighbor to "clean up" and beautify if you do your part.

Psychologists affirm that we are so dependent upon the beautiful, that were we absolutely removed from all that is lovely in nature or in art, we should die, although every other condition of life were fulfilled. Do you want your neighbor to do all the beautifying and you live only by what he has done? It is not in the power of every one in Seymour to have lawns, flowers and shrubbery, but it is possible for each house holder and each renter to have a clean door yard, back yard and alley. The beautiful is too often separated from the practical in daily life. Why not remove the weeds now, which are about to over-run Seymour. Let's not wait till the seeds ripen for a later crop. Pull them out by the roots. Our Board of Health has wisely given orders, which must be heeded. Weeds and decayed matter generate disease the same as do other things, about which we are more particular. Cleanliness around our premises will aid greatly in obliterating the common house fly which, it has been said, is more to be feared than a mad dog, or a snake, or a wild animal. The fly does not convey poison into the system by biting as does the mosquito, but carries disease germs around with him, and deposits them upon our food. He is responsible for much of our typhoid fever, tuberculosis and other malignant diseases. If you fear not these things for yourself, have a thought for your neighbor, and let us all begin at once to clean up and beautify our town, as far as it lies within our power.

SAINT TAMMANY DAY.

The Red Men are anticipating a big time at the Saint Tammany day celebration at the city park Sunday afternoon. Many visitors from outside the city are expected to attend. The members of the Pocahontas lodge will join with the Red Men in the celebration and state officers of each order will speak. The members of these lodges extend an invitation to citizens generally to attend. The parade from the hall to the park will start at one o'clock.

Contest Closed.

The annual penmanship contest at the Seymour Business College was decided Thursday evening in favor of Miss Augusta Grelle. By almost unanimous vote of the students, Miss Martha Schmidt, a former student, was selected to decide the contest. About fifty specimens of fine penmanship were shown.

PUSHING WORK ON BIG CANAL

Which Will Make Thousands of Acres in Scott County More Valuable.

THE I. & L. TRACTION COMPANY

Has Established Temporary Local Stop at Bridge For Benefit of Sight-seers.

High water in the low bottom lands of Scott County has caused enormous losses to the farmers of the county for many years. A low figure on the total amount of damage done in the last twenty years is estimated at a million dollars, the loss in a single year sometimes reaching $100,000.00. This amount is divided among crops, timber, livestock, roads and bridges. Various schemes for drainage have been projected year after year but none of them reached definite form until about a year ago, when the property owners affected by the high water held a meeting for the purpose of perfecting plans for a big drainage canal which would permit the water to be carried away before it had time to "back up" in the lowlands. About this time a preliminary survey of the proposed canal was made but when the cost was estimated to be $40,000.00 the project came near being abandoned. However, it was found that this estimate was too high and the petition for the ditch was presented to the Commissioners.

Favorable action was at once taken and the ditch commissioners advertised for bids. The contract was awarded the Daniels-Lyst Co., of Anderson for about $19,000.00, and was sold by this company to the Napanee Drainage Co. which is doing the work of building the canal. When completed the canal will be seven miles long and will shorten the course of the creek from sixteen to seven miles, calling for the removal of about 6,000,000 cubic feet of material. The work is being done with a large dredge boat which has now reached the bridges of the I. & L. Traction Company and the Pennsylvania R. R. The construction work on the canal is very interesting and attracts a great many sight-seers. In fact so many people have asked the traction company to allow the cars to stop near the dredge boat that this week the company established a temporary local stop at the railroad bridge which has just been reached by the dredge boat.

Scott County is showing an awakened progressive spirit in undertaking the first drainage proposition of any size in this part of the state. The northern part of the state has long recognized the value of draining bog lands of the lake region and it is probable that since the movement has been started in Southern Indiana, there will be more and greater drainage schemes launched than that now being done by Scott County. The cost of the canal is not paid by the county but will be borne by direct assessment on the owners of property which will be benefitted by the drainage afforded by the canal.

Since the drainage movement has started, investors in all parts of the country have become interested at once and inquiries are constantly coming in regarding the reclaimed land. A movement is now on foot for a mammoth drainage canal to drain Langdon bottoms and straighten the course of the Muscatatuck River, the canal to be nearly thirty miles long and costing in the neighborhood of $100,000.00.

PRERARING HIS PLANS FOR WAR

Madero Not Paying Much Attention to Peace Talk.

HE HAS LITTLE FAITH IN IT

The Go-Betweens Are Still Trying to Get the Federal Government and the Insurrectos in a Frame of Mind to Renew Peace Negotiations, but With Little Effect—Madero Establishes Capital in Juarez Customs House.

El Paso, Tex., May 13.—The insurrecto national government is going right along with its preparations for war, not troubling themselves in the least over peace plans. The federal go-betweens, Oregon and Braniff, are making efforts to bring the federals and insurrectos together, but Madero and his counsellors are paying little attention to peace talk, having little faith in it, and on the contrary are preparing for war. They do not believe that General Rabago is coming from Chihuahua to attack the town, but are preparing to meet him outside if he does. The forces, many of them, are already beginning to make their way out of the city and to the south and east, scouting for federals.

Madero has installed himself in the Juarez customs house, the building in which General Diaz entertained Mr. Taft less than two years ago, and says this building will be the capitol for the present. This is the third time Juarez has been a capital of Mexico. Benito Juarez first made it his capital, then Diaz made it the capital for two days, and now it is Madero's capital. Arrangements have been completed for opening the customs service in Juarez, preparatory to receiving importations.

Jose Vasconcelos was appointed confidential agent at Washington, succeeding Dr. Vasquez Gomez, new minister of foreign relations, and rules were adopted concerning local taxation and the entry of goods from the United States. Alberto Fuentes, provisional governor of Aguas Calientes, is to be collector of customs at Juarez. The dispatch from Washington stating that supplies of all sorts would be permitted to be taken into Juarez if properly entered through the custom house on this side, caused general rejoicing among the leaders. They look upon it as a tentative recognition of their cause.

No mail is being sent to Juarez and none will be sent, as it is necessary to get a receipt for the mail and no one is authorized to receive mail but regularly accredited Mexican federal government officers. Juan Gonzales, the new Juarez mayor, says that the town is rapidly being organized and that everything will be in order and perfect shape in a very short time. The different departments recently established by the insurrectos are running smoothly. The water mains running into the town are being repaired and the water supply put in order. The Northwestern railway has begun the repairs on the road between Casas Grandes and Juarez, and it is expected that trains will be running between the two towns in about a week. The telegraph lines on the Northwestern have been repaired and messages have been received from the insurrecto officials in Casas Grandes. Satullo Herrera has been appointed commandante of police of Juarez by the insurrecto chiefs.

Further Fighting Promised.

San Antonio, Tex., May 13.—Reports have been received by the military authorities here which indicate the advance attacks by insurrectos upon the two border towns of Ciudad Porfirio Diaz, opposite the Texas town of Eagle Pass, and Nuevo Laredo, across the Rio Grande from Laredo, Tex. The information is that the towns will be attacked simultaneously by rebel bands acting in concert and under the direction of Francisco Madero in Juarez.

GIVEN FURTHER TIME

Mine Examiners Couldn't Get Through in Time Allotted.

Indianapolis, May 13.—Acting on complaints from miners and mine operators in Vigo county that the ten days allotted by the new law requiring the examination and certification of miners before being permitted to work in the coal mines would not be sufficient to enable the 6,000 miners in that county to be examined, Governor Marshall has notified the county examiners to continue the examination until all the miners have had an opportunity to be examined. In the event any taxpayer objects to paying the examiners for the additional time required, the governor will pay them from one of his contingent funds.

To Join Dog in Death.

London, May 13.—In accordance with a wish revealed in his will, the body of Lafayette the Great, the eccentric vaudeville performer who lost his life in the fire that destroyed the Empire music hall at Edinburgh, will be cremated and the ashes placed between the paws of his trained dog, Beauty. The body of the dog rests in a pretentious tomb in Piers hill cemetery at Edinburgh.

JACOB M. DICKINSON

Secretary of War Gives Up Place for Business Reasons.

© 1911, by American Press Association.

WAR SECRETARY GIVES UP PLACE

Henry L. Stimson to Succeed Dickinson.

THE LATTER PLEADS BUSINESS

In Giving Up the War Portfolio, Secretary Dickinson Says Crisis in His Personal Business Affairs Necessitates His Return to Tennessee—The New Secretary Was Unsuccessful Candidate for Governor of New York.

Washington, May 13.—Henry L. Stimson of New York will succeed Jacob M. Dickinson of Tennessee as secretary of war in the Taft cabinet. Announcement of Mr. Dickinson's resignation and the selection of Mr. Stimson as his successor has just been made at the White House. Mr. Dickinson's resignation will become effective immediately upon the qualification of Mr. Stimson. The understanding here is that Mr. Stimson will take the oath of office and enter upon his new duties the latter part of next week. Mr. Taft will confer with Mr. Stimson in New York on Sunday, when the exact date of the change at the head of the war department will be determined.

The resignation of Secretary Dickinson marks the second break in the Taft cabinet. Richard A. Ballinger handed in his resignation as secretary of the Interior on March 7 and was succeeded a week later by Walter L. Fisher of Illinois.

In accepting Secretary of War Dickinson's resignation, President Taft said: "In every way your work has been admirable and entitles you to the gratitude of your countrymen. Personally I wish to thank you for what you have done and for your invariable sense of loyalty to the administration, and to express my deep regret that our delightful intimacy growing out of our official family relation is to end." Secretary Dickinson gives business reasons as his motive for retiring from the cabinet. While there have been reports from time to time in the past year that Mr. Dickinson contemplated retiring from the cabinet, the official announcement of his resignation came as a surprise to officers in Washington.

It was explained in behalf of Mr. Dickinson that most of his private fortune is invested in a coal company in Tennessee. The concern was recently placed in the hands of a receiver. In order better to protect his interests, Mr. Dickinson decided to resign. It is his purpose to return to his home in Tennessee.

White House officials have made it known that Mr. Taft selected Mr. Stimson for the war portfolio on his own motion. The president has a high regard for the New York man, whose record in the office of the United States attorney for New York was eulogized by Mr. Taft in the campaign last year, when Stimson was running for governor on the Republican ticket.

TAKEN OFF SAFELY

All Hands Escape When Ward Liner Was Sent to the Bottom in Collision.

New York, May 13.—The Ward liner Merida, due at this port from Vera Cruz, Progresso and Havana, was rammed amidships by the fruiter Admiral Farragut of the American Mail Steamship line in a heavy fog, fifty-five miles east, one-half north of Cape Charles, and after the transfer of the passengers and crew of the Merida to the Admiral Farragut, the Ward liner foundered in thirty-five fathoms—210 feet beyond the hope of salvage and too deep to interfere with the progress of the deepest ships. All the Merida's passengers, 202, were saved. The passengers, officers and crew of the Merida arrived in Norfolk last night aboard the Old Dominion steamship Hamilton, which took them from the Admiral Farragut.

Tried to Cut Former Wife's Throat.

Logansport, Ind., May 13.—Roy Titus, former poolroom proprietor, was convicted by a jury of assault and battery on his divorced wife with intent to commit murder. He knocked her down in the street and had a razor drawn to cut her throat when a policeman interfered. The jury fixed his punishment as 180 days in the county jail and a fine of $400.

GOING TO LEAVE IT TO THE PROSECUTOR

Ohio Legislators Explain Their Position.

Columbus, O., May 13.—According to a statement made by Chairman Tod of the committee, the Ohio senate's so-called "whitewashing" committee plans to immunize no assemblyman whom Prosecuting Attorney Turner thinks he can indict and convict. Tod was empowered to speak for the committee, members of which have remained silent in the face of persistent criticism of its purpose. He declared the committee was not formed to grant immunity or to interfere with the proposed prosecution, but to acquit members of the assembly who are innocent. Sweeping charges made have involved all members, he says, and it is right and just, in the opinion of the committee, for it to give a clean bill to the innocent. The committee is going after news writers and other authors of published articles, according to Tod. They must show the source and extent of their information, he says. The committee will look especially into the claim that some newspaper men sought to disorganize the committee before it began its work. The grand jury is expected to report more indictments Monday or Tuesday. Present plans are for bribery trials to begin next Wednesday.

Guilt of Attempted Murder. Sullivan, Ind., May 13.—A jury in circuit court found Jesse Southerland guilty of attempting to murder Melvin Webster in a saloon at Star City, five years ago, by stabbing him with a knife, and Judge Bridwell sentenced him to the penitentiary for from two to fourteen years.

The Trend Towards Osteopathy.

(Editorial Cincinnati Enquirer.)

"The whole tendency of medical thought and experience now is in the direction of abandoning the extensive use of drugs. Just as the teaching of a moral liberal religion has softened, if not destroyed, the old orthodox dogmas of original sin, fore-ordination and eternal hell, the growth of homeopathy has immensely modified the old orthodox allopathic system of bleeding and drastic administration of drugs.

Both these influences have been sturdily resisted by the standpatters in religion and medicine, but both have largely succeeded. Insurgency is the order of the day everywhere. Another more recent influence which has helped to reduce drug-giving has been the coming of osteopathy, which has found its way to reluctant recognition.

"It has unquestionably demonstrated that many ills for which drugs were being given grew out of osseous (bony) displacements or maladjustments, and needed only skillful manipulation."

"Now it is perceived that Nature intended that everyone should be healthy, and that the only causes of disease are either a mechanical injury or poison or impurities taken in to the system or waste remaining there and clogging it. Disease, according to the latest school of thought, is simply the effort of Nature to remove poison and obstructions and should not be suppressed or aborted, but Nature should be aided to sustain the system until the work is completed."

"Thousands have arisen to testify that osteopathy restored them to health. Almost daily additional triumphs over so-called incurables are being recorded, evidencing that the osteopaths are finding the keys and opening the seals and coming into possession of the glorious heritage to mankind—health, through Nature's methods."

"Here is seen osteopathy, backed by multitudes of witnesses from all walks of life, who attest to its potency and clamor for its treatment. It is contributing to human happiness and comfort by displacing disease with health."

WORTH WEIGHT IN GOLD

Lady Learned About Cardui, The Woman's Tonic and is Now Enthusiastic in its Praise.

Mount Pleasant, Tenn.—"Cardui is all you claim for it, and more," writes Mrs. M. E. Rail, of this place.

"I was a great sufferer for 2 years and was very weak, but I learned about Cardui, and decided to try it. Now I am in perfect health.

"My daughter, when changing into womanhood, got in very bad health. I gave her Cardui and now she enjoys good health.

"Cardui is worth its weight in gold. I recommend it for young and old."

Being composed exclusively of harmless vegetable ingredients, with a mild and gentle medicinal action, Cardui is the best medicine for weak, sick girls and women.

It has no harsh, powerful, near-poisonous action, like some of the strong minerals and drugs, but helps nature to perform a cure in a natural easy way.

Try Cardui.

TAFT'S NEW SECRETARY.

Charles D. Hilles Will Be a Factor in the 1912 Campaign.

Charles Dewey Hilles, the new secretary to President Taft, is proving a good mentor. Hilles' predecessor, Charles D. Norton, quit the job in order to become vice president of the First National bank of New York city. J. P. Morgan's pet banking institution. Norton messed things because he was not a politician. Hilles is a medal man in the matter of political sagacity. He is regarded as just the man that Taft needed, and he is expected to be a big factor in the 1912 campaign.

Hilles is a man who doesn't make mistakes. President Taft knows that he doesn't. For this reason the president defers more to Mr. Hilles' judgment, and the result is that all questions pertaining to patronage and politics are being expedited these days at the White House. The Republican senators and representatives are discovering that they can get action in a reasonable length of time and that the action when it comes is reasonably certain to be diplomatic and effective—good politics, in other words.

They are also assured that when they go to the White House to talk matters over they will pour their troubles into sympathetic ears. Mr. Hilles is one of the best listeners that Washington has ever known. Hilles receives his callers as if he had nothing to do for a week save listen to the tale of each individual, and when they leave him they go away soothed and encouraged to believe that they will either get what they want or that everything will go to pot if they don't get it.

HOW TO MAKE BAD BOYS GOOD

Teach Them to Be Gardeners or Florists, Says Harvard Professor.

The wayward boy—the boy with criminal or mischievous tendencies—may be served with greater advantage to himself and his future development by being apprenticed to a gardener or florist than by going into any other line of work is the opinion held by Professor Charles S. Sargent of Harvard. He says:

"There is no doubt that the occupation in which a man engages reacts upon his personality, and I believe that gardening has an elevating effect upon the men who are employed in it. A wayward boy thrown into work among growing plants would be brought under a better influence than in almost any other occupation he might follow. Any association with plants and flowers cannot fail to have an elevating effect on the human mind. If a wayward boy was set to work under the direction of a gardener or florist who would impress upon him regularly of habits, together with a working knowledge of plants and their culture, it would go a great way toward putting a boy on the right track in life."

LIFE AND MILLIONS SACRIFICED IN LONGEST STRIKE IN THIS COUNTRY

Miners and Operatives at Loggerheads For Fourteen Months

Ten Thousand Men Are Living on an Allowance of $2.50 a Week

THE strike of the Westmoreland county (Pa.) coal miners, which remains unbroken after fourteen months, has lasted longer than any other strike in the history of labor unionism in this country.

Over 10,000 miners, living on an allowance of $2.50 a week collected through fifty cent assessments from every union miner in this country and forwarded from the headquarters of the United Mine Workers of America in Indianapolis, have been eking out an existence amid the greatest vicissitudes within a stone's throw of twenty-eight of the richest coal mines in this country without having swung a pickaxe or lifted a shovel for over a year.

As for the owners of the twenty-eight mines, they publicly made the statement not long ago:

"We pay the state of Pennsylvania $100,000 a year in taxes, yet we haven't mined a ton of coal for over a year."

The mine owners in explaining their refusal to arbitrate the strike or to consent to the strikers' terms say that they are "merely trying to manage our own business in our own way without interference from the labor unions."

The Miners' Side.

The striking miners, on the other hand, say that for many years every wagon of coal they have filled has been unfairly measured by the company officials and that they have had to work twelve hours a day instead of the desired eight hours. They say they have been obliged to patronize the companies' high priced stores and that they have been discharged by mine foremen because they refused to vote a certain political ticket.

They say they were forced to bear the cost of the new explosives and of the safety lamps which the companies have prescribed in the mines during the last two years. They say that they held a grievance meeting in Greensburg fourteen months ago to protest against these costly prescriptions and that a score of the men who had participated in this meeting were discharged by the coal companies. They say that they felt that the only way to protect themselves from continued oppression from the companies was to insist on the companies recognizing their newly organized union.

The companies, on their side, retort that the miners' objections to the new explosives and safety lamps are mere pretenses and that the miners were all perfectly contented until delegates of the United Mine Workers of America came from the Indianapolis headquarters and began to talk unionism in the region.

Since the 15,000 miners formally struck in March, 1910, and marched from one mine to another in the district calling to their fellows to strike, too, there have been bloodshed and misery a-plenty throughout the Greensburg district.

120 Babies Die.

Scores of strikers, deputy sheriffs and strike breakers have been beaten, stoned and shot. Out of the 349 babies that have been born in the temporary homes of the miners since the strike began 120 have died. The miners themselves, having been dispossessed from the drab colored rows of wooden houses rented to them by the coal companies near the mines before the beginning of the strike, have built a colony of wooden shacks.

These shacks, according to persons who recently visited them, are not even weather proof. They are built from whatever loose lumber the miners were able to pick up through the district. Throughout the bitterest days of the past winter they were SACCHARIN BARRED.

Government Forbids Its Use—Said to Disturb Digestion.

All persons having a desire for something sweet must find other means of satisfying the craving than saccharin. That popular substitute for sugar will be forbidden after July 1. The flat of the agricultural department prohibiting the use of saccharin in any food product has gone forth.

Saccharin technically is a product of coal tar. It is used as a substitute for sugar and is 300 per cent sweeter than sugar. The objection to saccharin is that it is a disturber of digestion.

The decision is of the most sweeping nature. It directly affects more than thirty different classes of food, including soft drinks, sweet pickles, jellies, jams and also some makes of beer.

The referee board of consulting scientific experts in its report says:

"The continued use of saccharin for a long time in quantities over three-tenths of a grain per day is liable to impair digestion. The addition of saccharin as a substitute for cane sugar or other forms of sugar reduces the food value of the sweetened product and hence lowers its quality."

heated with pans of such coal as the miners could pick up near the mine entrances and along the roads.

Following this winter of shack life there are many tales of suffering, of children born in open fields, of families that lived fireless through fierce storms of snow. According to the mine owners, the strike would never have begun but for the mine workers' national organization, and both sides agree that but for the contributions of the national organization the strike would have been broken long ago.

$20,000 Distributed Weekly.

Every week since the strike started $20,000 has been sent to Greensburg from the mine workers' national headquarters at Indianapolis. The money being deposited in the shape of a check in a Greensburg bank.

It is drawn out in specie and greenbacks by a man named McCartney, who represents the national organization in the striking district. It is carried by him to the second floor of a deserted private residence in a Greensburg side street, which is occupied by the strikers as a local headquarters and which has paper instead of panes of glass in its windows. Once a week across a kitchen table while a line of almost 1,000 men, women and children file by him he pushes a bill or a handful of silver across to each in turn—$2.50 to each man, 75 cents to each woman and 50 cents to each child in every striking miner's family. Every mine worker in this country, it is said, is being taxed 50 cents a week to make up this weekly $20,000 contribution to the Greensburg strikers.

According to a recent visitor to the strike gripped region, about ten persons have been killed and nearly 100 wounded in the course of the fourteen months' strike.

The striking miners say that all they want is to arbitrate with the mine owners. They set much store on the fact that Governor Tener of Pennsylvania stated publicly recently that he was greatly in favor of a congressional or legislative investigation of the disagreement of the miners and employers. A bill making possible a congressional investigation has already passed the house of representatives and is before the senate.

Arbitration Desired.

What the strikers would particularly like, according to their representatives, is the creation of an arbitration commission of three. One member of this commission would be chosen by the strikers, the other by the mine owners and the third either by the first two commissioners or, if these could not agree, by Governor Tener himself.

A few weeks ago in a pouring rain the striking miners of Greensburg had a big procession celebrating the strike's fourteenth month of unbroken continuance. Fifteen hundred men, 100 women and 150 children marched in the ranks. Two wealthy and philanthropic women and two clergymen of widely different creeds led the procession and afterward joined in making speeches to the strikers in the town's cramped and crowded public hall.

One of the women was Mrs. Glendower Evans of the Woman's Trade league of Boston. She is the wife of a stockholder in one of the mines in which the strike is going on. The other woman was the wife of a political officeholder in Pittsburg.

One of the two clergymen was the Rev. D. L. Schultz, who last August resigned his position as pastor of the Loraine Street Baptist church of Pittsburg in order to work among the strikers. The second clergyman who headed the strikers was Rabbi R. I. Coffee of the Tree of Life synagogue of Pittsburg.

WHALE NETTED FORTUNE.

It Yielded Oil and Something Else, Ambergris Worth $60,000.

In a vault at the headquarters of a wholesale drug firm in Boston are about 100 pounds of ambergris. It is valued at $60,000, according to experts.

Trade quotations give the present market value of ambergris at from $10 to $15 an ounce. The 100 pound package is by far the largest amount of ambergris received in Boston or New England in many years and is said to be of uncommonly high quality. It was picked up by the crews of the bark Bertha, Captain Ben Vera, and the brig Viola, Captain John A. Cook, who found it while whaling off the coast of Africa in December.

The crews of the Bertha and Viola were pursuing sperm whales when the lookouts sighted several spouting in the sunlight. One fellow about thirty feet long lagged behind the others. He was sluggish, and it happened that the harpoons which simultaneously pierced his sides came from small boats from both ships. That's why the crews are dividing the spoils.

The laggard yielded only fifteen barrels of oil, but the grumbling of the whalers was dispelled by the huge black lump of ambergris taken from him.

New Jersey Governor's Wife May Be Next "First Lady of the Land."

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the governor of New Jersey, may be the next "first lady of the land." Several of the leaders of the Democratic party have already declared for Wilson for the Democratic nomination for president in 1912. If he should be nominated, and if the Democrats should be successful—well, when all those ifs have been solved in her favor, Mrs.

MRS. WOODROW WILSON.

Wilson will be the mistress of the White House. Just now she is acting as the hostess of the executive mansion at Trenton.

Mrs. Wilson was Miss Ellen Louise Axson of Savannah, Ga., when she married Professor Wilson in 1885. She is a charming, rosy woman, with a wealth of golden hair, and the women who have met her say that she would add much to the social life of the national capital. She is a musician and a painter of ability.

The Wilsons are great churchgoers, attending the Presbyterian church. They have three children, all girls, Margaret, Jessie and Nellie.

Windows For Umbrellas.

Windows or portholes for umbrellas have been placed on the market by a concern which believes there is sufficient reason for such an innovation to make it popular.

The windows are isinglass and are sold either separate or attached to a new or old umbrella. Their purpose, of course, is to enable the user to see ahead when holding an umbrella as a protection against a driving rain.

FRANCISCO I. MADERO.

Leader of Mexican Insurgents Comes From Old and Wealthy Family.

There are several picturesque figures in the Mexican conflict. One is Francisco I. Madero, leader of the insurgents. Madero is descended from an old and wealthy family. He has many brothers and sisters.

Madero was educated in Europe, the United States and elsewhere and then returned to Mexico and went into politics. He wrote a book exposing the Diaz government and then ran for the presidency. Before doing so he made his will. Running for president in Mexico is not without its perils. Madero was landed in jail before election day and was, of course, defeated. He afterward succeeded in escaping and made his way to the United States. Seeing that peaceful opposition to the Diaz regime was idle, he launched the revolution, going back to his country to lead it in person.

One of the anomalies of the situation is that all the Maderos are not working together. Some of Francisco's brothers and a number of his uncles are not revolutionists at all. If he could unite the family he could doubtless whip Diaz, as the clan Madero has always believed in large families and flourishes as the stars of heaven or the seed of the patriarchs.

CHAPTER VIII. "LILA—LILA!"

"LET us enter by the side door," suggested Sweetwater as the two moved toward the house. "And be sure you place me where I can see without being seen. I have no wish to attract attention to myself or to be identified with the police until the necessity is forced upon me."

"Then we won't go in together," decided Hexford. "Find your own place; you won't have any difficulty. A crowd isn't expected. Miss Cumberland's condition forbids it."

Sweetwater nodded and slid in at the side door. He found himself at once in a narrow hall, from the end of which opened a large room. A few people were to be seen in this latter place, and his first instinct was to join them; but, finding that a few minutes yet remained before the hour set for the services, he decided to improve them by a rapid glance about this hall, which, for certain reasons hardly as yet formulated in his own mind, had a peculiar interest for him.

The most important object within view, according to his present judgment, was the staircase which connected it with the floor above, but if you had asked his reason for this conclusion he would not have told you, as Ranelagh might have done, that it was because it was the most direct and convenient approach to Carmel Cumberland's room. His notice led him next to a rack upon which hung several coats and a gentleman's hat.

He inspected the former and noted that one was finished with a high collar, but he passed the latter by—it was not a derby. The table stood next the rack, and on its top lay nothing more interesting than a clothesbrush and one or two other insignificant objects; but, with his memory for details, he had recalled the keys which one of the maids had picked up somewhere about this house and laid on a hall table. If this were the hall and this the table, then was every inch of the latter's simple cloth covered top of the greatest importance in his eyes.

He had no further time for even these cursory investigations. Hexford's step could be heard on the veranda, and Sweetwater was anxious to locate himself before the officer came in. Entering the room before him, he crossed to the small group clustered in its farther doorway. There were several empty chairs in sight, but he passed around them all to a dark and inconspicuous corner from which without effort he could take in every room on that floor—from the large parlor in which the casket stood to the remotest region of the servants' hall.

The clergyman had not yet descended, and Sweetwater had time to observe the row of little girls sitting in front of the bearers, each with a small cluster of white flowers in her hand—Miss Cumberland's Sunday school class, he conjectured, and conjectured rightly. He also perceived that some of these children loved her. His eyes dwelt lingeringly on these before passing to that heaped up mound of flowers under which lay a murdered body and a bruised heart. He could not see the face, but the spectacle was sufficiently awe compelling without that. Would it have seemed yet more so had he known at whose request the huge bunch of lilies had been placed over that silent heart?

The sister sick, the brother invisible, there was little more to hold his attention in this quarter, so he let it roam across the heads of the people about him to the distant hall communicating with the kitchen.

Several persons were approaching from this direction, among them Zadok—the servants of the house, no doubt, for they came in all together and sat down side by side in the chairs Sweetwater had so carefully passed by. There were five persons in all—two men and three women. Only two interested him—Zadok, with whom he had already made a superficial acquaintance and had had one bout, and a smart, bright eyed girl with a resolute mouth softened by an insistent dimple, who struck him as possessing excellent sense and some natural cleverness. A girl to know and a girl to talk to was his instantaneous judgment.

During the services Sweetwater found himself watching, with anxious curiosity, the attitude and absorbed expression of a good looking young man whom he was far from suspecting to be the secret representative of the present suspect, whom nobody could forget, yet whom nobody wished to remember at this hallowed hour.

Had this attitude and this absorption been directed toward the casket over which the clergyman's words rose and fell with ever increasing impressiveness he might have noted the man, but would scarcely have been held by him. But this interest, sincere and strong as it undoubtedly was, centered not so much in the services, careful as he was to maintain a decorous attitude toward the same, but in the faint murmurs which now and then came down from above, where unconsciousness reigned and the stricken brother watched over the delirious sister with a concentration and abandonment to fear which made him oblivious of all other duties and almost as unconscious of the rites then being held below over one who had been as a mother to him as the sick girl herself, with her ceaseless and importunate "Lila, Lila!" The detective, watching this preoccupied stranger, shared in some measure his secret emotions and thus was prepared for the unexpected occurrence of a few minutes later.

The final words had been said and the friends present invited to look their last on the calm face which to many there had never worn so sweet a smile in life. Some had hesitated, but most had obeyed the summons, among them Sweetwater. But he had not much time in which to fix those features in his mind, for the little girls, who had been waiting patiently for this moment, now came forward, and he stepped aside to watch them as they filed by, dropping as they did so a tribute of fragrant flowers upon the quiet breast. They were followed by the servants, among whom Zadok had divided his roses. As the last cluster fell from the coachman's trembling hand the undertaker advanced with the lid and, pausing a moment to be sure that all were satisfied, began to screw it on.

Suddenly there was a cry, and the crowd about the door leading into the main hall started back as wild steps were heard on the stairs and a young man rushed into the room.

"Take it off!" he cried, pointing at the lid which had just been fastened down. "I have not seen her! I must see her! Take it off!"

It was the brother, awake at last to the significance of the hour!

The clergyman, aghast at the sacrilegious look and tone of the intruder, stepped back, raising one arm in remonstrance and instinctively shielding the casket with the other. But the undertaker saw in the frenzied eye fixed upon his own that which warned him to comply with the request thus harshly and peremptorily uttered. Unscrewing the lid, he made way for the intruder, who, drawing near, pushed aside the roses which had fallen on the upturned face, and, laying his hand on the brow, muttered a few low words to himself. Then he withdrew his hand, and, without glancing to right or left, staggered back to the door amid a hush as unbroken as that which reigned behind him in that open casket. Another moment and his white, haggard face and disordered figure would be blotted from sight by the door jamb.

The minister recovered his poise and the bearers their breath. The men stirred in their seats and the women began to cast frightened looks at each other and then at the children, some of whom had begun to whimper, when in an instant all were struck again into stone. The young man had turned and was facing them all, with his hands held out in a clinch which in itself was horrible.

"If they let the man go," he called out in loud and threatening tones, "I will strangle him with these two hands!"

The word and not the shriek which burst irrepressibly from more than one woman before him brought him to himself. With a ghastly look on his bloated features he scanned for one moment the row of deeply shocked faces before him, then tottered back out of sight and fled toward the staircase. All thought that an end had come to the harrowing scene, and minister and people faced each other once more, when, loud and sharp from above, there rang down the shrill cry of delirium, this time in articulate words which even the children could understand.

"Break it open, I say! Break it open and see if her heart is there!"

It was too awful. Men and women and children leaped to their feet and dashed away into the streets, uttering smothered cries and wild ejaculations. In vain the clergyman raised his voice and bade them respect the dead, for the rooms were well nigh empty before he had finished his appeal. Only the least of the children remained.

Soon these, too, were gone, and the casket was refastened and carried out by the shrinking bearers, leaving in those darkened rooms a trail of desolation which was only broken from time to time by the now faint and barely heard reiteration of the name of her who had just been borne away. "Lila, Lila!"

Sweetwater, however affected by this scene in the funeral chamber, had not lost control of himself nor forgotten the claims of duty. He noted at a glance that while the candid looking stranger whose lead he had been following was as much surprised as the rest at the nature of the interruption—which he had possibly anticipated and for which he was in some measure prepared—he was of all present the most deeply and peculiarly impressed by it.

Sweetwater took occasion likewise while the excitement was at its height to mark what effect had been made on the servants by the action and conduct of young Cumberland.

It was not so easy to determine as the anxious detective might wish. Only one of them showed a simple emotion, and that one was, without any possibility of doubt, the cook. She was a Roman Catholic and was simply horrified by the sacrilege of which she had been witness. There was no mistaking her feelings. But those of the other two women were more complex.

So were those of the men. Zadok specially watched each movement of his young master with open distrust and very nearly started upright in his repugnance and dismay when that intruding hand fell on the peaceful brow of her over whose fate to his own surprise he had been able to shed tears.

And the women! Might not the same explanation account for that curious droop of the eye with which the two younger clutched at each other's hands to keep from screaming and interchanged whispered words which Sweetwater would have given considerable out of his carefully cherished hoard to have heard.

It was impossible to tell at present, but he was confident that it would not be long before he understood these latter at least. He had great confidence in his success with women, homely as he was. He was not so sure of himself with men, and he felt that some difficulties and not a few pitfalls lay between him and, for instance, the uncommunicative Zadok. "But I've the whole long evening before me," he added in quiet consolation to himself. "It will be a pity if I can't work some of them in that time."

Plans had been made for carrying the servants to the cemetery, and, despite the universal disturbance consequent upon these events, these plans were adhered to. Sweetwater watched them all ride away in the last two carriages.

This gave him the opportunity he wanted. Leaving his corner, he looked up Hexford and asked who was left in the house.

"Dr. Perry, Mr. Clifton, the lawyer; Mr. Cumberland, his sick sister and the nurse."

"Mr. Cumberland! Didn't he go to the grave?"

"Did you expect him to after that?" Sweetwater's shoulders rose, and his voice took on a tone of indifference.

"There's no telling. Where is he now, do you think—upstairs?"

"Yes. It seems he spends all his time in a little alcove opposite his sister's door. They won't let him inside for fear of disturbing the patient, so he just sits where I've told you, doing nothing but listening to every sound that comes through the door."

"Where's his room? In sight of the alcove you mention?"

"No; there's a partition or two between. If you go up by the side staircase you can slip into it without any one seeing you. Coroner Perry and Mr. Clifton are in front."

"Is the side door locked?"

"No."

"Lock it. The back door, of course, is."

"Yes; the cook attended to that."

"I want a few minutes all by myself. Help me, Hexford. If Dr. Perry has given you no orders take your stand upstairs where you can give me warning if Mr. Cumberland makes a move to leave his post or the nurse her patient."

Five minutes later Sweetwater had slipped from sight, and for some time not even Hexford knew where he was.

Dr. Perry, may I have a few words with you?"

The coroner turned quickly. Sweetwater was before him. "It'll not take long," added the detective, with a short significant glance in the direction of Mr. Clifton.

Dr. Perry nodded, excused himself to the lawyer and followed the detective into the small writing room which he had occupied during the funeral. In the decision with which Sweetwater closed the door behind them there was something which caused the blood to mount to the coroner's brow.

"You have made some discovery?" said he.

"A very important one," was the quick, emphatic reply. And in a few brief words the detective related his interview with the master mechanic's wife on the highroad. Then with an eager "Now let me show you something" he led the coroner through the dining room into the side hall, where he paused before the staircase.

"Up?" queried the coroner, with an obvious shrinking from what he might encounter above.

"No," was the whispered reply. "What we want is here." And, pushing open a small door let into the under part of the stairway, he disclosed a closet and in that closet a coat or two and one derby hat. He took down the latter and, holding it out to the light, pointed to a spot on the under side of its brim.

The coroner staggered as he saw it and glanced helplessly about him. He had known this family all their lives, and the father had been his dearest friend. But he could say nothing in face of this evidence. The spot was a flour mark, in which could almost be discerned the outline of a woman's thumb.

Not So Easy as It Seemed.
Twelve persons decided to lunch together every day and agreed not to sit twice in the same order. One of the number, a mathematician, surprised his associates by informing them that their decision meant that one and one-third million years must elapse before they would again be seated in the original order. Two men can sit together only in two different ways, three in six ways, four in twenty-four, five in 120, six in 720, seven in 5,040, eight in 40,320, nine in 362,880, ten in 3,628,800, eleven in 39,916,800 and twelve in 479,100,000.—Buch fur Alle.

SATURDAY NIGHT SERMONS

BY

REV. SAMUEL W. PURVIS, D.D.

THE HOUSE UPSIDE DOWN.

Text, "They that have turned the world upside down."—Acts xvii, 6.

Sometimes the devil unwittingly tells the truth. This is one of the times. The crowd ran yelling the accusation through the streets of Thessalonica. But it was sin, not Paul, that had turned the world upside down. He was turning it right side up. It's according to your point of view. The Chinese begin to read at the end of the line and at the bottom of the page. The bat hangs upside down and laughs at a topsy turvy world. The skeptic stands on his head intellectually and says, "See me hold up the world!" The world smiles, but the skeptic still argues. Remember the "House Upside Down" on the midway at the Buffalo Pan-American exposition? Carpets, rugs, chairs, tables, dishes, were on the ceiling. Wall paper and pictures on the wall were upside down. Finally you got confused and you couldn't tell whether 'twas the house or you that was upside down. You felt that you were walking, fly-like, head down from the ceiling.

The truth is this is a topsy turvy world. One man saving to build a house, another selling below cost. One's fighting for justice, another fleeing from it. One man spending money for flowers for a woman, his neighbor spending money for a divorce. One man's at the drug store for medicine to prolong life; another's buying poison to end his. Thousands come into the world upside down and always continue so. They are human crabs—ever going backward. Society is life upside down. The world started right, but Satan, Archimedes-like, got his lever under it and with sin turned it upside down. Paradise turned to perdition, heaven to hell. Christ comes and with the lever of the cross turns it right side up. Life is a house. With many it is upside down. Heredity, environment, education, indigestion, false standards, have put us wrong. Things are distorted, misplaced, untrue.

Ground Floor.

Kitchen's on this floor. To get along with a man "feed the brute!" says the cynical woman. Food's fuel. Fasting's not always a duty. Feasting's not always a sin. Sometimes fasting's a sin and feasting a duty. John fasted. Jesus feasted. Girls at school are taught calculus, but not cooking. In the coal regions of my state they say "strikes are caused by bad cooking." In a lumber camp where men saw wood they get dinner with a can opener and a coffeepot. Brides had better not cook that way if the wood of the desk is the only lumber their husbands see. Many a kitchen's upside down. Smile in the dining room. Ask a blessing, but don't eat. There's a kind of palsy that's a disease of the liver. No gossip, no snarling, at your table. A hearty laugh may do as much good as Oolong or Java, tenderloin or cutlet. Parlor's on this floor. It's artificial, superficial and shallow. In it we act like puppets and dress like dolls. Secretly we hate the parlor. We keep it dark, stiff and formal. "Children," calls mother, "keep out of the parlor. You'll break something!"

Sleeping rooms are on this floor. Third of our lives are passed there. When you reach threescore and ten you'll have spent nearly twenty-five years there. Babyhood and childhood mean much sleep. "Bedrooms upside down?" Sometimes. Either barren as a barn or formal as a funeral. Man has to figure out those pink log pillows—to be slept on or used as a barricade for the door? Is the crazy quilt a coverlet or an ornament? Best sleep I ever had was when as a college boy I went preaching in the country. Big, well ventilated room, whitewashed walls. After I had said "Now I lay me" a dear old fashioned, motherly woman came to tuck me in bed, put hot bricks to my feet and prayed that God would bless the poor preacher boy. That night I slept the sleep of childhood. On this floor in the front room with the big bay window is the sitting room—no, living room, I mean. That's the room. Here's where you are yourself, where you play with the children, where you read the Bible and have family prayers. Make the living room of life right!

The Attic.

"Except ye become converted and as little children," said Christ. Remember that third story attic room in your old home? Children multiplied. Trundle beds were added. Then we were packed to bed up in the attic under the eaves. There we heard the pattering rain upon the roof. There we saw the twinkling of the stars at night. They wove themselves into poetry and dreams. There in the cedar chest was grandmother's wedding dress. She was but sixteen then. Yonder hung grandfather's Revolutionary sword. How it used to gleam in the moonlight! That was the place for dreams! The fragrance of the lilacs and roses came in the little attic windows. Not spider webs did our child eyes see, but fresco of angels. With the passing of the attic third floor went our dreams and visions. From our soul's top floor we can see across the river of death to the glowing domes and towers of the shining city beyond. In the house right side up the lower windows look out on the ash pile and household garbage can. The upper windows see Sweet fields beyond the swelling flood. Stand dressed in living green.

SERVICES TO BE AT RIVERVIEW.

Will be Conducted by Knights of Pythias.—Three Uniformed Bands
Engaged for Parade.

Union memorial services will be held Sunday, June 4, by the six lodges which have for several years past joined in holding such a service.

Committees representing these lodges, the Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, Woodmen, Elks, Eagles and Red Men, met Friday evening and selected as officers of the committee to have charge of this year's service: C. W. Burhart, chairman, Dr. B. S. Shinn, secretary, Ed. Loertz, treasurer, Frank Smith, Herman Bartlett and A. D. Shields, members of advisory committee.

It was decided to hold the services according to the same plans as heretofore. The Columbus, Seymour and Brownstown uniformed bands have been engaged for the day. The line of march of the parade will be arranged and announced later.

The ceremony or services will take place at Riverview cemetery as heretofore. Inasmuch as the Odd Fellows, the oldest of the six lodges taking part, conducted the services last year, the Knights of Pythias, the next oldest, will be in charge this year. Next year the Woodmen will be in charge.

The union services in the past have been very successful. Last year with four men marching abreast, there was a parade three or four blocks long. This year the First Battalion of Seymour, which is made up of the uniformed teams of the Odd Fellows, K. of P. and Red Men, have been invited to take part in the parade and all have accepted.

The Knights of Pythias lodge will decide upon the details of the service at Riverview. A speaker may be selected or the ritualistic work of the order may constitute the service.

PRIEPKE DEAD.

He Was a Member of the Old Seymour Reds Ball Club.

A dispatch from Utica, N. Y. dated Friday says: "Herman (Red) Priepke, of Laporte, Ind., the second baseman, obtained from the Boston Americans by the Utica Club, died here last night. Priepke accompanied the Boston team on its transcontinental trip, and at Oakland took a severe cold, which never left him. Recently pleuro-pneumonia developed and caused his death. He was 31 years old.

Priepke played 3rd base with the old Seymour Reds in 1906. He was a crack player at that time and the fast company he has been in since leaving here shows that he had improved.

Suspicious Returns.

The state superintendent has been receiving reports of the school enumeration in various towns and cities of the state and some of these reports show remarkable gains as compared with the census reports. He will make an investigation of reports of school enumeration suspiciously at variance with the census returns. The report from Seymour showed a loss of 89, Columbus 47, Greensburg gained 9, Madison lost 144.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

The Leroy Stock Company will be at the Majestic all next week. The company is said to have several good specialties.

The members of the eighth grade of the Shields school gave a picnic today near Farmington. They left here on the ten o'clock car.

Elder Offutt, an evangelist from Rushville, will begin a series of meetings at the Christian church in Crothersville tonight.

Ex-Governor Hanly was the guest of Rev. Harley Jackson Thursday and Thursday evening. They spent the day at the Jackson apple orchard.

George Ernst, who lost a $40 roll of money a few days ago, recovered it through a classified ad in the Republican. It pays to use the classified column.

Mrs. John Critcher returned from Columbus this morning where she was called Monday by the serious illness of her father, John Riley. He is improving.

Rev. Ralph Cross, of Brooksbury, was here this morning on his way to Freetown to attend the dedication of the new Methodist church Sunday. His mother, Mrs. Anna Cross, accompanied him.

The Hancock orchestra furnished the music for the Paoli commencement Friday evening. Rev. Mr. Omelvena, formerly of Seymour, pronounced the invocation. The members of the orchestra, Estel Hancock, Norman Barkman, Amelia Brand and Grover Moore of North Vernon, visited West Baden and French Lick while gone.

FROM THE TROPICS TO HEAL US.

In Central America many natives are gathering the seeds of this plant, Cedron Seed, a rare medicine that has valuable curative powers. But few drug stores carry this seed, owing to the high cost of the article.

This country is a large consumer of this costly seed because it enters into the famous catarrh remedy, Peruna, sold the world over.

Since the Hon. Mr. Neal, adept forger and confidence man, has gained his liberty, we hear little about the black guilt of his alleged accessory. It looks like the prosecution had a case of official limber-neck as long as the spinal chord.—Scott County Democrat.

In 1893 while running a store at Tampico, Ray Keach advertised a free trip to the World's Fair and expenses to the one who would guess the nearest to the number of eggs bought at the store in two weeks. Thousands of eggs were bought within the time and the man who won the contest guessed within a few dozens of the correct figure. He was a gentleman of some leisure and spent the greater part of his time watching the egg baskets which were carried into the store and making inquiries of the sellers.

William Hodapp of Hamilton township, has a fine ten year old soft maple in his yard. On May 10 of last year, he measured the circumference of the tree about three feet from the ground and found it to be 3 feet and 1 inch. On the same date this year he again measured the tree and found the circumference at the same distance from the ground to be exactly 4 feet showing a growth of eleven inches in one year. Few persons would guess that a maple of any kind would show such a growth in twelve months but Mr. Hodapp has the records to prove it.

The Reccius ball team of Louisville will play the Blues at Crothersville Sunday afternoon.

Ward Brinkman, who has been in the city hospital for treatment, was able to be taken home this morning.

John Peek, of Hayden, is in Seymour today visiting his son, F. M. Peek, who is quite sick at the home of R. L. Moseley.
